

Historic Shopping & Dining Attractions adds South Street Seaport Museum

NORTH BRUNSWICK, N.J. — Historic Shopping & Dining Attractions (HSDA) has added the South Street Seaport Museum located at South Street Seaport in Lower Manhattan, New York City, to its alliance.

The Seaport Museum recently re-opened.

The 16 galleries of historic and contemporary exhibitions interweave the city, the sea and the seaport neighborhood through photography, video, historic artifacts and contemporary design.

“We are excited to have the museum join our alliance as it adds strength to the HSDA brand, particularly the important history and cultural components,” said Carolyn J. Feimster, HSDA travel and tourism manager.

“We know that both domestic and international travelers love to shop and dine as their top activities, plus the Department of Commerce has statistics that proves a strong relationship between the cultural traveler and the shopper. HSDA capitalizes on these trends.”

HSDA includes three destinations and attractions in the United States, including South Street Seaport in New York City, Faneuil Hall Marketplace in Boston and Union Station DC in Washington, D.C.

For more information on South Street Seaport Museum, call (212) 748-8600 or email info@seany.org.